

there's even a possibility I might not be here. Yes, Senator Haberman, quit chuckling with glee. It is possible, probable maybe. Three legislative sessions is more than enough time. You know we came within a vote or two, repeatedly, of raising $100 million this year alone. LB 38. So what is so difficult as long as you are doing the Class I matter, which I don't like and I don't think you are doing right, why not really do the historic step and lock in there, lock in there the refinancing. That is the underlying cause of it all. Address it. If you can't get her done in three legislative sessions, for God's sake, don't kid yourself, you're not going to do her in five, not with a whole new group of people. I urge you to adopt the amendment. You will have something even the opponents of 662 can say we did something, now we have a justification for this bill. Since it is going to pass anyway, we now have something we can take back home and talk about. We've done the bigger thing. They did their Class I's and, yes, they made some people mad, but we did the big thing, we refinanced the whole system of education. Somebody said, would you vote for the bill? By golly right, you do this because it's going to pass anyway, I suspect a whole bunch of the opponents will have to vote for the bill. They've got no choice then because they are getting something done. They are getting something out of 662. Why don't we dare to be great and do her today? This amendment gets you going on it. You are not going to kill the bill. Vard knows there are at least 28 or 29 votes, and even the dumbest one in here, and I don't mean any of us, of course, I simply mean people that might be looking at voting patterns, even the dumbest one would figure out, by this time, that there are 28 minimum, maybe as many as 30 on particular occasions, votes for the bill. Whether it involves a certain person stepping out, a certain person passing so he can juggle it, there are the votes for the bill. The most the opponents can muster anymore, the most we can muster, 21, 22. I've done yeomen's work voting with them. It is time to recognize reality. Reality is this bill is headed for passage. She's headed for passage. Get the best deal you can. Change the system.

SPEAKER NICHOL: One minute.

SENATOR DECAMP: Make the pony work for you instead of simply being something that is an enemy. I would tell my Class I's who are going to say, well what the heck are you
